Carpenter ants! They're strong, they're industrious, and they're one of nature's best cleanup crews. Unfortunately, when they start chewing on your house, they're no longer welcome. In fact, they can often do damage much faster than termites in the Inland Northwest.

Most likely, we're going to treat the exterior perimeter of your home with Termidor. It's non-repellent, meaning the ants will walk through it, track it back to the colony, and not even know it. It's our big brains vs. their big numbers.

We may also treat wall voids with Premise, a non-repellent expanding foam, and inside with Phantom, another non-repellent.

To help you prepare for our arrival, here are a few things that will help make our treatment more effective:

INSIDE:

- Clear at least 1' of wall access where we'll be treating.
- Make sure toys are put away and there's no laundry obscuring areas we need to treat.
- Move the furniture away from the wall a bit.

OUTSIDE:

- Clean up toys and tools next to the house.
- Move all—yes, all—wood away from the side of the house. Don't leave firewood, sticks of wood, or anything else by the house.
- Remove all branches, rose bushes, grass, etc. touching the house. NO vegetation should be in contact with the siding.
